QUICK BRIEFS

17th Comptroller Squadron Change of Command: The 17 CPTS is scheduled to conduct a change of command ceremony today at 10 a.m. at the Goodfellow Club.

Lt. Col. Jeffrey Coggin will relinquish command of the squadron to Maj. Stephen Cristofori.

Praise Craze: The 17th Training Wing Chapel office plans to host a student, family and community outreach concert series. The series, called Praise Craze, is scheduled for Saturday at the Goodfellow Rec Camp at Lake Nasworthy from 1:45-8:45 p.m.

For more information see ad on Page 13.

Newcomer's Orientation: The next newcomer's orientation briefing is scheduled for Tuesday at the Goodfellow Club.

Only individuals who have been scheduled by Senior Airman Christina Kuske or the commander's support staff must attend in order to maintain data integrity and accountability. The orientation starts at 7:45 a.m. and is an all-day event.

For more information, call 654-3307.

Housing Requirement Survey to close by close of business today:

The mandatory web-based survey is available for all services, civilians, retirees, accompanied or unaccompanied, living on base or in off-base housing, at <http://airforcehousing-survey.us/>. Select Goodfellow from the pull-down menu. The case-sensitive password is: good3311. The survey takes 15 minutes to complete, and is essential to future housing development.

17 TRW Historian wins consecutive AETC Heritage Awards

By AIRMAN 1ST CLASS LUIS LOZA GUTIERREZ

EDITOR

Dr. John Garrett, 17th Training Wing historian, has been awarded the 2006 Air Education and Training Command Heritage Award, marking the second consecutive time he has won the honor.

The Heritage Award "recognizes outstanding accomplishments by the Air Force History and Museums Program personnel to foster a better understanding and appreciation of the United States Air Force." Nominees are judged against the following criteria: content (depth or breadth of research, quality of interpretation), utility (timeliness and relevance of the topic to the Air Force) and presentation (attractiveness of the final product).

The award was presented to Dr. Garrett in recognition of the EC-47 project and dedication ceremony, where a VC-117 aircraft was restored into an EC-47Q aircraft, which flew the Air Force's final airborne radio direction finding mission (ARDF) over Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

"Goodfellow trained the intelligence crews for these ARDF missions, and four of our buildings (Cressman, Leftwich, Melton and Ryon) are named for Intel crewmembers who perished while on these missions," the insightful historian noted.

Dr. Garrett has won several other notable awards during his tenure at Goodfellow.

Prior to winning the AETC Heritage Award in 2005 and 2006, Dr. Garrett also won the Heritage Award at the Air Force level. His first time winning the AETC Heritage Award was in 1998.

In addition, Dr. Garrett has won the Outstanding History Program Award at AETC and Air Force levels in 2003. He is currently competing for this award at the Air Force level.

"Dr. Garrett's recent recognition is no surprise to me or the wing," said Col. Andrew Britschgi, 17th Training Wing vice commander. "This award, like others he has received in the past, is a testament to the dedication and excellent work he contributes to Goodfellow and the preservation of its history," the colonel added.

"I believe these characteristics, along with continued nomination and selection for awards such as the AETC

Erma Brooks, 17th Communication Squadron software license manager and equipment control officer, was recently named 2005's Air Education and Training Command Information Specialist of the Year.

Col. Scott Bethel, 17th Training Wing commander, presented her with the award July 6.

Ms. Brooks was chosen for the AETC-level award due to her outstanding performance in communications and information and her overall excellence in duty performance.

Erma Brooks reviews an appointment letter in her office Wednesday. Her recent award was of a ceramic eagle. The award is on the right side of this photo.

"Mrs. Brooks is the hardest working person that I know. She has a can-do and positive attitude that I have rarely seen. Mrs. Brooks is the perfect balance of kindness, dedication and loyalty. Her selection as the AETC Communications and Information Civilian of the year is well deserved," said Capt. Stephen Harding, a former information systems flight commander with the 17 CS.

"I was shocked but very grateful when it was announced at a squadron commander's call," said Ms. Brooks. "My co-workers congratulated me and said it was well deserved, but no one truly wins an award alone," she added.

"All equipment control office personnel deserve credit for the outstanding job they do, day in and day out," she said. "Together we can... and we did."

Over the past 37 years, Ms. Brooks has received many base-level awards, too many to mention. The following list contains some of her most recent awards:

- ◆ 17th Communications Squadron Civilian of the Year GS-7 through GS-9, 2005

- ◆ 17th Training Wing Information Management Civilian Specialist, 2005

- ◆ 17th Communications Squadron Civilian of the Quarter, GS-7 through GS-9, 2005

- ◆ 17th Support Group Civilian of the Year GS-7 through GS-9, 2000

In addition to the awards previously mentioned, Ms. Brooks has in the past been named Air Training Command Supply Supervisor of the Year; ATC Outstanding Supervisor of the Year; 17 CS Civilian of the Year, GS-7 through GS-9 and 17 CS Civilian of the Mexican border town policies

By order of Col. Scott Bethel, 17th Training Wing commander, the cities of Ciudad Acuña and Piedra Negras adjacent to Del Rio and Eagle Pass, Texas, are off limits to all military personnel during hours of darkness.

In addition, "Boys Town" in Ciudad Acuña is strictly off limits at all times to all Goodfellow military, including active duty, guard and reserve personnel.

These actions are being taken to ensure the safety of all Goodfellow personnel. These restrictions will remain in place until further notice.

All other Goodfellow personnel, including Department of Defense civilian employees, contractors and family members, are advised to exercise appropriate caution.

Two for the money, three to get ready, four to go!

Commander's
Column

By LT. COL. JEFFREY COGGIN

17TH COMPTROLLER SQUADRON

I know you must think - my what an unusual title! Oddly, the numbers 2 - 3 - 4 seemed to hit the mark for some final thoughts I would like to share with you before departing Goodfellow. So here it goes...

TWO FOR THE MONEY:

It is hard to believe, but it has been two years since I took command of the 17th Comptroller Squadron. I have learned much about leadership and financial management during my tour. The past two fiscal years have been very challenging due to reduced budgets, rate increases and growing training requirements. However, thanks to the hard work and expertise of the wing's financial management team, commanders, and resource advisors, Team Goodfellow not only accomplished our very important mission, but also continued to improve our troops' quality of life on a daily basis.

THREE TO GET READY:

As new officers "get ready" to assume our wing's command positions, I have three recommendations:

1. LEADERSHIP, not LIKER-

SHIP. Being a leader requires you to make tough and sometimes unpopular decisions. It is fine to be friendly with your troops, but you cannot be friends. You must always remain objective and cannot be swayed by personal relationships when tough decisions are to be made, like when you will deploy downrange "in harms way." You cannot avoid holding people accountable or administering discipline when required, just so you will not lose "cool points" with your troops.

Coggin

2. United We Stand, Divided We Fall! Throughout your tour, you will need to work closely with other squadrons and wing agencies to ensure Team Goodfellow continues to excel. Never believe your unit is an island that can stand alone. You will also find fellow commanders are great sounding boards when times get tough and you have no one else to consult.

3. Do not over-lead. By being too dominant of a leader, it does not allow others to develop. As a commander, you are hired to lead - and at the end of the day, you will be held accountable for the actions of your unit. However, leave some "leadership vacancies" so others can step up and take the reins. Sure, the outcome may not be exactly what you had in mind and mistakes may be made - but at the end of the day, you are accomplishing one of your most important duties as a commander, growing future Air Force leaders.

FOUR TO GO:

As the Coggin family of four prepares to depart, we will always have a special memory of our tour at Goodfellow. We are extremely excited about our move to Lincoln, where I will pursue an Air Force-sponsored PhD at the University of Nebraska. However, I know it will be difficult to find a more friendly and supportive community than San Angelo, Texas. As the wing's comptroller, I worked many late nights and weekends over the past two years. However, I always felt comforted knowing my family was "safe and sound" in our neighborhood and my children were taught by teachers who really cared about their future. Additionally, it was great not having to face massive traffic jams on the "306 Beltway" when commuting home after a 14-plus-hour day. Without a doubt, to know San Angelo, is to love San Angelo! Kay, Kody, Brandon, and I could not have asked for a better assignment - Goodfellow was "SPOT-ON" for the Coggin Family. So, as we point our vehicles toward the cornfields of Nebraska, we wish Team Goodfellow God's richest blessings, much happiness, and continued success in the future! CHACHING!!!

Get involved!

Commander's
Column

By LT. COL. JULIE PLUMMER-ASHBAUH

17TH LOGISTICS READINESS SQUADRON

Are you bored and tend to just stay in your room, apartment, or house during the weekends? Do you only know and hang out with other military members and their families? Sounds like me a year ago.

Our first year here, I did not get out much and meet many San Angelo locals. I knew I was missing out. I had my reasons that year, with a new baby and a first year in command of a squadron keeping me busy.

Last summer, I became involved in different things in the local community. I am glad I did. I met some really wonderful people and developed good friendships. It also made the year go by faster, or so it seems.

I will always have fond memories of my assignment to Goodfellow and of San Angelo because of the friendships that I have developed here.

Plummer-Ashbaugh

It will be hard to say "good-bye" in a few months to my new friends. I feel I am a better person and would have missed out on the opportunities to have developed these strong friendships, had I not made the effort to be involved in the community. Hopefully, I have also enriched the lives of my new friends and they are better people for getting to know me.

If you are not happy or do not have fond memories of Goodfellow or San Angelo yet, I suggest you get out, become involved in the community and meet new people. You will be glad you did. Plus, I am sure your time here will be happier and also will go by quicker than if you continued to hide out in your room, apartment or house during your off-time.

THE BENEFITS OF
QUITTING TOBACCO

Within 20 minutes of quitting - your blood pressure and pulse rate drop to normal and the temperature of your hands and feet increases to normal.

Within 8 hours of quitting - your carbon monoxide levels drop and your oxygen levels increase, both to normal levels.

Within 24 hours of quitting - your risk of a sudden heart attack decreases.

Within 48 hours of quitting - nerve endings begin to regenerate and your senses of smell and taste begin to return to normal.

Within 2 weeks to 3 months of quitting - your circulation improves and walking becomes easier; even your lung function increases up to 30 percent.

Within 1 to 9 months of quitting - your overall energy typically increases and symptoms like coughing, nasal congestion, fatigue, and shortness of breath diminish; also, the small hair like projections lining your lower airways begin to function normally. This increases your lungs' ability to handle mucus, clean the airways, and reduce infections.

Within 1 year of quitting - your risk of coronary heart disease is half that of someone still using tobacco.

Earlier this month the 17th Communication Squadron received a special military vehicle called the RAIDER.

The RAIDER is a military Humvee customized as a mobile vehicle for the execution of quick transmission of information.

RAIDER stands for the Rapid Attack Information Dissemination Execution Relay.

As part of a one billion dollar program, the RAIDER is the ground component of this effort. The RAIDER is paired with the Battlefield Airborne Communications Node to provide robust interoperability for the joint and coalition combatant commander.

The squadron will play host to the RAIDER mobile for about one month, said Master Sgt. Kevin Farthing of the 17 CS.

The squadron is scheduled to receive two other RAIDER vehicles in October.

"Once the two new RAIDER mobiles arrive, our squadron will have two years to develop a training program for the RAIDER vehicles. The program will then be implemented as formal technical school training at Keesler Air Force Base, Miss.," said Master Sgt. Farthing.

They will take the lead to "operationalize the capability" by fielding a cadre of instructors to teach other DOD units how to operate RAIDER. The squadron will also develop tactics, techniques and procedures and provide input for future spiral developments of system upgrades.

The Professional Enhancement Center hosted an Air Education and Training Command special assignment team mass briefing July 6 at the base theater.

The briefing was conducted by two noncommissioned officers, who are currently in the recruiting field.

The briefing began with a slide presentation by Tech. Sgt. Matthew Davidson, an Air Force Recruiting Screening Team member from Randolph Air Force Base, Texas.

During his part of the briefing, Sgt. Davidson dispelled rumors about recruiters being deployed.

Staff Sgt. Joseph Thornberry, 737th Training Support Squadron Military Training Instructor Recruiting team NCO in charge from Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, continued with a very insightful video on becoming an MTI.

Sgt. Thornberry mentioned the Air Force is currently looking to fill 70 slots for both MTI's and Military Training Leaders.

"Our objective is to maintain a steady flow of strong minded NCOs looking for a challenge outside their career field," he said.

Both recruiters opened the floor for questions and comments at the end of their briefings.

Interested individuals can refer to the information listed below for the respective special duty assignments.

By GEN. WILLIAM LOONEY

AETC COMMANDER

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AETCNS) - Recently, I celebrated my first anniversary as a member of the Air Education and Training Command team. During this time, we've faced a number of challenges and achieved tremendous success fulfilling our mission to develop America's Airmen today for tomorrow.

Shortly after I arrived, Hurricanes Katrina and Rita devastated Keesler and a large portion of the Gulf Coast region. Instantly, I was amazed by your willingness to roll up your sleeves, jump in, and help those overpowered by these destructive storms. From performing heroic rescues to delivering emergency medical care to providing safety and security, First Command Airmen made a difference. Despite heavy damage to its infrastructure, the arduous task of rebuilding Keesler was quickly underway, thanks again to your efforts. In fact, just days after Katrina wrought unspeakable destruction on the Biloxi and Gulfport areas, Keesler was back in business, training Airmen in critical career fields to keep our Air Force strong in the Global War on Terrorism.

Even through our recovery efforts, First Command Airmen remained focused on our mission, taking AETC to new heights in the process.

Our recruiters smoothly shifted efforts to help the Air Force meet our congressionally mandated end-strength, bringing in over 20,000 new enlisted and officer personnel in the process. In addition, Basic Military Training graduated over 22,000 enlisted personnel and restructured the course to match a typical AEF cycle in order to provide our new recruits more readiness and combat skills instruction. Along with their BMT accomplishments, in the arena of initial and advanced skills training, 2nd Air Force and their technical training units graduated nearly 190,000 students.

Execution of the flying mission was outstanding! The organizations of the 19th Air Force flew nearly 560,000 hours, graduated 1,259 pilots and almost 20,000 new aircrewmembers.

Additionally, the modernized avionics and glass cockpits in the T-6A and T-38C, combined with the stand-up of the F-22A Raptor training program at Tyndall AFB, allowed AETC-trained pilots to become combat ready and continue our tradition of air dominance.

All along, Air University continued to be a recognized pillar of excellence, providing educational opportunities to over 179,000 graduates via residence and distance learning programs.

All total, AETC recruited, trained, and educated more than 432,000 Airmen for our Air Force and the joint commanders during our first year together. And you accomplished all of this while deploying 3,822 AETC Airmen to fight the GWOT.

Marilyn and I have had the opportunity to visit all of our installations and meet the magnificent men and women who make up AETC. At each and every stop, we are awed and overwhelmed with the dedication, commitment, and performance of our Airmen and their families. It is so obvious that the strength and foundation of AETC is our people. Your commitment to integrity, service, and excellence keep us the recognized world center of excellence for training and education. And you--the Airmen of the First Command--are the key in making AETC a "command of choice."

Let me also take this opportunity to thank all our family members for their unwavering support and sacrifice. Without you, we would not be the world's greatest Air and Space Force!

With all we've done so far, I'm excited to begin my second year as your commander, and look forward to even greater accomplishments as we continue to deliver unrivaled education and training to the greatest Air and Space Force the world has ever seen. It's my great privilege and honor to serve with you as we develop America's Airmen today ... for tomorrow.

System Banner

As part of the Standard Desktop Configuration (SDC) mandated by Air Force and AETC policy, workstations are being pushed Banner 3.1 software which will display a small banner across the top of your desktop. The banner should be green in color for unclassified systems.

Common Access Card

For personnel who are currently logging onto the network with their CAC, and all CAC-enabled personnel after July 31, the Standard Desktop Configuration (SDC) being pushed to all workstations forces an automatic logoff of the session for the user any time the CAC is removed from the reader for more than 15 minutes. This means that if you remove your CAC to lock your terminal you will automatically be logged off the network.

This policy is mandated by the Air Force SDC and AETC policy. Please ensure that when removing your CAC for more than a few minutes to save all of your open files and work. Failing to do so may result in lost work or files.

F-35 dubbed "Lightning II"

WASHINGTON (AFPN) -- The Air Force chief of staff announced Lightning II as the F-35 name during a Joint Strike Fighter Inauguration Ceremony today at the Lockheed Martin Aeronautics Co. at Fort Worth, Texas.

Gen. T. Michael Moseley made the final decision after an extensive nomination and review process, coordinated with the other services and partner nations.

In naming the F-35, General Moseley said, "Today, the enemies of peace and freedom have been put on notice. They have feared this day because the F-35 provides the coalition warfighter the perfect blend of speed, precision and stealth."

"In my travels, Airmen have given me some great suggestions that we'll see on new Air Force weapons systems in the near future," he said. "The name for the F-35, Lightning II, was a win for aviation heritage and culture."

The heritage associated with this name played a significant role in its selection. The original P-38 Lightning was also a strike fighter and had the most air-to-air kills in the Pacific during World War II. Both of America's top two aces -- Maj. Richard Bong, 40 kills, and Maj. Thomas McGuire, 38 kills -- scored all of their victories in the P-38 Lightning in WWII.

The Lightning II name also draws parallels with a formidable force of nature. Like lightning, the F-35 Lightning II will strike with destructive force. The stealth characteristics of the jet will allow the F-35 to strike the enemy with accuracy and unpredictability; when the enemy finally hears the thunder, the F-35 is long gone.

The F-35 Lightning II is the next generation strike fighter bringing cutting-edge technologies to the battlespace of the future. The Lightning II's advanced airframe, autonomic logistics, avionics, propulsion systems, stealth and firepower will make it an affordable, lethal, supportable and survivable aircraft for warfighters across the globe.

The Air Force is the Department of Defense's executive agent for designating and naming military aerospace vehicles. Air Force and Navy representatives proposed the Lightning II name during the review process.

NEW AVENGERS COME TO GOODFELLOW

The third issue of Marvel Comics' The New Avengers has been released as a free military tribute in Army and Air Force Exchange Service stores, AAFES announced in June.

Titled "Time Trouble," the issue features Marvel's superheroes "The New Avengers," including Captain America, Nick Fury and Luke Cage, along with special guests X-Men and Spiderman. The heroes are sucked through a time portal to World War II, where they must take on the evil Kang.

"Time Trouble" will be available on a first-come, first-served basis, AAFES said.

SECAF releases letter to Airmen

BY THE HON. MICHAEL W. WYNNE

SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE

Congratulations! As a leader in the Total Force Integration the Air Force continues to benefit from one powerful, cohesive team formed by our Active Duty Airmen, Air National Guardsmen, and Air Force Reservists. In my travels around the Air Force, I see this synergy firsthand and realize our training and operations make it impossible to differentiate between the three components. Whether it is the C-17 landing in the combat zone or the mechanic working on F-16s in Vermont, the Total Force is making it happen.

We simply could not accomplish today's dynamic mission without the Total Force integration of our Guard, Reserve and Active Duty force. Gone are the "strategic reserve" days of the Guard and Reserve. Today, our total force sacrifices daily through extended deployments in the most challenging missions we have. As an integral part of this highly skilled team, the Guard and Reserve train to the same high standards set by our Active Duty, operate the latest equipment and participate in every mission across the spectrum of operations.

Our Active Duty, Guard and Reservists stand side by side in the fight in the Global War on Terrorism. Nowhere was this more apparent than in the recent airstrikes that killed the leader of Al-Qaeda in Iraq, Abu Al Zarqawi. In Balad, the 332nd Expeditionary Maintenance Squadron mirrors where our Air Force is going: an Active Duty Commander, an Air National Guardsman as Operations Officer, and a Reservist as First Sergeant. The collective efforts of Active, Guard and Reserve forces continue to yield tremendous successes for the Joint Team and our Nation.

So what does this mean for you, the individual Airman? First, this means that we have a healthy respect for those Total Force Members that support our mission. Second, we need to adhere to the set standards, to ensure that as we assemble the total force we remain prepared to execute the assigned mission. Third, we need to use the diversity represented by the Total Force to continually look for better ways to accomplish our mission.

Total Force has moved from a future concept to today's reality. One team, one fight, with a shared, disciplined combat focus. The continued dedication and service of all Airmen -- Active, Guard, and Reserve -- make a grateful Nation proud. Thank you for all you do.

MOVIES

Movies start at 7 p.m. in the base theater unless otherwise noted. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children under 11. Movie times are subject to change without notice.

The Breakup

Today and Thursday

Vince Vaughn and Jennifer Aniston star in this movie rated PG-13. Pushed to the breaking-point after their latest, "why can't you do this one little thing for me?" argument, art dealer Brooke calls it quits with her boyfriend, Gary, who hosts bus tours of Chicago. What follows is a series of remedies, war tactics, overtures and underminings suggested by the former couple's friends, confidantes and the occasional total stranger. When neither ex is willing to move out of the condo they used to share, the only solution is to continue living as hostile roommates until somebody caves.

The Omen

Saturday

Seamus Davey-Fitzpatrick and Julia Stiles star in this R-rated movie. Robert Thorn is a senior American diplomat whose wife, Katherine, endures a difficult delivery where their newborn child has died. Thorn knows the news will devastate Katherine, who had suffered two previous miscarriages. The hospital priest presents Thorn with another child born that night, whose mother died in childbirth. The priest compels Thorn to take the infant boy as his own; Katherine will never know the truth, and their son, which they name Damien, will be raised as their flesh and blood.

X-Men: The Last Stand

Sunday

Hugh Jackman, Ian McKellen and Patrick Stewart star in this movie rated PG-13. The continuing adventures of the superpowered group, the X-Men, led by Professor Xavier, and based at his school for gifted students, as they try to foster good will for mutants like themselves, in a world where some people are born with extraordinary powers, and many ordinary humans fear them for it.
